Creative Strategy

Rachael Mortimer

Creative Strategist and Author

London

Summary

I am a bold strategic and creative thinker who believes in the power of innovative brand stories to effect business transformation. I have a natural instinct and genuine interest in how people think, connect and participate with brands. With over 20 years experience in brand communications (Advertising, PR, Digital) I have worked across most sectors - FMCG, Pharmaceutical, Retail and Financial Services, B2B and B2C.

I live and breathe stories so its only natural I love to write too. I'm also a children's author with seven books published globally. I love working with ideas and in addition to being a commercially driven upstream planner I am extremely nurturing of the creative process. I have always been viewed as a strong team player, diplomatic but forceful, happy to work with all levels within an organisation and ultimately to make things happen.

Some kind words colleagues and clients have said about me

"Rachael is one of the best planners I have worked with. She is passionate about making a difference, extremely bright and has what I think sets great planners apart - truly creative inspiration." Agency Managing Partner

"She is quite unique. Opinionated, headstrong and forceful on occasion but always driven by pure motives of brand integrity, and the highest possible creative intention." Agency Chairman and Executive Creative Director

"Behind her pleasant and gentle manner Rachael's rigour and inquisitive nature has helped strengthen all the projects she has worked with me on. She builds strong client relationships too and through this has grown business opportunities." Agency Group Account Director

"Rachael immerses herself in the business to the point it's impossible to separate her from your core team. She has enabled us to more clearly articulate our unique voice and derived a positioning that the whole company can get behind and be proud of." Client CEO

Brand Stories

Strategic Planner

September 2006 - September 2012 (6 years 1 month)

We love stories for what they make us think and feel. The stories that make us think and feel the most tend to be those that stay with us.

Brands with an understanding of the power of storytelling work hard to create compelling characters with real back stories. Stories that really touch their audiences.

As an experienced strategic planner and author creating stories is my passion. I generate insights and concepts for research, advertising and new product development. I write creative briefs, presentations, new business pitches and research proposals.

I am particularly interested in building on my storytelling experience to help brands place themselves at the heart of a good story to create not just brand properties but entertainment and educational content.

As a children's author I am often involved in specialist panels to advise on children's issues/markets and brands.

Other recent projects have been as diverse as soft drinks, computer games, dairy products, pet food and toothpaste.
